Dear Mr. Dulles,

I do not know whether you remember me, since so many years have passed since I worked for you during the war. But remembering your kindness I would like to ask you to do me a favour, if it is possible.

My father, [redacted] died in November 1958, when he had already left his post [redacted]

[redacted]
[redacted] are preparing a book to his memory. The chapters of this book, written by different people, cover different periods of my father's life. We have already gone through his letters, and found nothing concerning the last years of his [redacted] and the work which, with your cooperation and help, he then did for his country. We were wondering whether you would have any documents of that period which could be of use to our work. It goes without saying that you would be the only judge of whether they can be divulged or not. We would be very grateful to you for any letter, document, suggestion or account of your relationship with him that you could give us.

Please forgive me for asking, but we are very anxious that the book be as complete a picture of my father's life as can be achieved, and the years of the war are amongst the most important.

Thanking you in advance I am
